

The Age of Romance poetry is known for its spirited poems inclined on the side of emotions. The poets were supported by the pillars of Nature, imagination, and sublime inspiration.

As screen writers write scripts based on books, this book is based on the writings of Keats, Shelley, Shakespeare and others.

Following are lines from Poetic Starlight.

...Poems are soft roses: red, peach, and yellow,
Soothing memories of her gentle fellow.
...As the curtain falls on Twilight's eve,
A lover's dream begins to weave.
...Distracted I drift deep into the forest dim,
Lost in the woods I fear Brothers Grim.
...On rivers of wind, updrafts of airy fountains,
The valley breeze is the song of mountains.
...My soul's blown away as I'm hit with spice,
Hot sensations that are saucy, naughty and nice.

---

Poetic Starlight

Stories of John Keats, Romance, and Travel

Stacy David

---

